PARK THEATRE

In "Blondie Johnson," coming Wednesday and Thursday, Joan Blondell appears as a beautiful and brilliant leader of a big time band of criminals. She gets her man, or rather men, in more ways than one. Some she raises to power, only to dethrone according to her whim, while those that get in her way she eliminates with startling finality. For Joan, as Blondie, is cold, hard-boiled, ruthless and merciless. She sways men to her will and rules them with an iron hand. There is no changing the fiery and peppery personality of the delightful Joan, however, and her gay, reckless abandonment to the part she plays is evident throughout the picture. Chester Morris plays the leading masculine role.—adv.

BANKING CENTERS CHEERFUL

Banks In This State Await Word From Governor and Banking Commissioner—Early Reopening

The bank situation throughout the country continues to command the attention of all citizens. Here, as elsewhere, a feeling of calmness prevails, the concern of the average depositor being coupled with a faith that wise heads in the Nation and State will grapple successfully with the situation.

No statement was obtained from local bankers this morning. "We are holding the turn, pending further advice," is the way the president of one bank expressed it.

When Maine banks will reopen without restrictions was a question Governor Louis J. Brann and bank Commissioner Sanger N. Annis were unable to answer yesterday despite long conferences from which it was expected an announcement would result.

"We shall make every effort to comply when we receive word that the State's banks are authorized," said Gov. Brann.

At present Maine banks are restricted to paying $10 per person on payroll checks and to disbursing funds for relief of actual distress.

This morning's bulletins said that new currency is now available for Federal Reserve banks; that State banks are rapidly opening; that the American dollar shows strength; and that reports from the 12 Federal Reserve central cities were that bank deposits had far exceeded withdrawals, bolstering the revitalized flow of credit through business channels. Some Chicago banks had to furnish extra facilities for handling new accounts.

PRESIDENT WOTTON

Central Board of Basketball Officials Pays a Deserved Tribute

Charles C. Wotton of Rockland was elected president and Paul Flaherty of Portland, vice president, of the Western Maine Central Board of Basketball Officials Association, at a meeting in Lewiston Saturday. H. H. Sampson, principal of Bridgton Academy, for many years secretary-treasurer of the organization, was re-elected to this post unanimously. A Lewiston despatch says:

"The new president of the Association does most of his officiating in the coastal cities of the Rockland section, where he is recognized as one of the leading arbiters. Flaherty, former Hebron Academy and Portland Athletic Club star, has come forward in the past two years to gain an enviable name for himself as an official."

A brief discussion of rules, with officials agreeing that this year's regulatory measures had assisted the game, and the scheduling of a meeting, date to be determined, before next year's court season, for a discussion of rules and any changes that may be made in the interim, were the only other business features of the meeting.

NATION'S CAPITOL

Associated Press Says Maine "Stole the Show" At the Opening Session

A Washington correspondent has this to say about the Maine delegation in Congress:

Maine Democracy, coming into its own for the first time in years, temporarily stole the show at the opening session of the new House. The argument over the seating of John G. Utterback of Bangor was the first real party fight of the 73d Congress aside from the routine selection of a speaker. Furthermore the address of Representative Moran of Rockland, in defense of his Democratic colleague, broke an unwritten precedent that new members should be seen rather than heard. Flushed, but calm, Moran carefully outlined Utterback's claim to the Third District seat and received generous applause from the 300 odd Democrats.

Prominence has been coming rapidly to Moran even before he took the oath of office. The House Democratic leaders chose him as a member of the committee to divide the country into districts from which a steering committee will be selected. Observers predict that Moran and Utterback will receive full share of honors from their colleagues. It would be good business too, they point out, for the Democrats to recognize Maine whenever possible to help its members in their campaign for re-election in 1934.

On the Republican side of Congress, Maine is retaining its traditional position. Representative Beedy of Portland, moves higher on the House Banking and Currency committee, which at the moment is one of the most important factors in legislation.

Senator White was given a place in the Interstate Commerce committee in place of membership on the Education committee, a shift regarded by his colleagues, as a good promotion. Senator Hale becomes ranking Republican on the Appropriation committee, as well as holding a seat on the powerful Rules and Naval Affairs groups.

The desk assigned to Senator Hale in the Senate chamber is of historic interest. It was once used by Daniel Webster.

From the appearance of his office the impression might be gained that Representative Moran has just breezed in from the South. It is filled with potted palms left behind by the previous occupant.

Representative Beedy was the right hand man of Republican Leader Snell during the opening House session. He sat at Snell's right through most of the afternoon.

Representative Moran is waiting for a "breathing spell" before he tackles the appointment of postmasters. As soon as the special session of Congress takes a recess, Moran says he plans to study recommendations for all the offices which must be filled immediately.

ALLEN MAKES REPLY

Says He Did Not Receive All the Goods Miss Corbett Names

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

In reference to the statement of Miss Corbett in your issue of March 9, I wish to say that she has misinformed the public concerning my statement at Kimball hall. My complaint was concerning articles which I did not receive, and did not know they were missing until my wife took them out of the bag.

Saturday morning I went to her like a gentleman and tried to explain that I did not receive them, but she would not listen to me. All she would say was that the slips were up stairs. Then I asked her about coal, and she told me it was due the 8th. My coal would have lasted if my wife had not been sick, so that I had to turn a fire night and day.

As for my being on the city for years, I never called on the city for help until I was thrown out of employment on account of the quarry shutting down in Vinalhaven. Then she gave me orders to move to Rockland. I do not want the public to be misinformed that I will not work for I always have worked, and if I could get work today I would not be asking for help; but as for pride forbidding a man to ask for help for his children and let them suffer, I do not think that is justified, for the children's sake. I figure that pride and poverty do not go together.

SHE IS NOT SORRY

Gertrude Johnson Glad She Spoke For Unemployed—Respects To Toiva

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

In a spirit of fair play you will please grant me space in your paper? I have been the object of much publicity of late in the columns of The Courier-Gazette and I wish to state that I am in no way regretful of being the spokesman for the Unemployed Council, for I have been deeply moved by the pitiful stories of poverty and distress now existing in Rockland and vicinity.

One outstanding feature of the City Council's decision, and which should be remembered by the unemployed, was their willingness to deal with them individually. Let me quote Wendell Phillips: "I rejoice at every effort workingmen make to organize. I hail the labor movement. It is my only hope for democracy. Organize and stand together! Let the nation hear a united demand from the laboring voice."

I can only feel appreciative for the published information that I am not related to Toiva Johnson.

POSTAL RECEIPTS

Have Shown Marked Decline In Rockland Office Since the Peak Year

There is no better index to general business conditions than the receipts of the postoffice.

Back in 1918, when the three cent stamp went into effect, there was a steadily shown a substantial increase which continued until 1930 which proved to be the peak year, as far as the Rockland office is concerned.

Then the pinch of hard times became more manifest and the decrease within one year was in excess of $3000. The 1932 report showed a similar loss, and the returns from the first six months of the fiscal year show a decline of about $1100.

Here are the figures of the Rockland postoffice under the present administration: 1928, $58,446.98; 1929, $60,672.56; 1930, $62,354.80; 1931, $59,146.70; 1932, $56,205.73; 1933, (six months) $30,263.45.

To the unpopularity of the three-cent stamp is attributed much of the decline in postal receipts. Business men have sought other methods of distribution.

HAS HAD BUSY LIFE

H. P. Farrow Has Done Civil Engineering In Seven Counties—Political Offices

Hiram P. Farrow, the subject of this sketch, was born in Belmont, Me., March 7, 1856, the eldest son of Luther and Lucy E. (Pitcher) Farrow. Through his paternal grandmother Selma (Ozier) Farrow, his descent is traced down from two of the Mayflower company, Edward Dotey and Gov. William Bradford.

"I believe in upholding laws of the United States rather than allowing the country to be over-run by rebel gangs and cliques," says Hiram P. Farrow.

the two lines uniting in Elizabeth Baker, who became the wife of Joseph Ozier, a lieutenant in the Revolution.

His boyhood education was only such as the common country schools of that day afforded, supplemented by private study. In early life he entered the building trade, soon taking up the practice of civil engineering which he pursued in seven counties and in a tenth of the cities and towns in Maine, numbering among his clients some of the leading people of the country.

He became a member of the Boston Society of Civil Engineers in 1909 and later a charter member of what is now the Maine Association of Civil Engineers.

Mr. Farrow was elected commissioner of Waldo County in 1882, representative to the Legislature in 1894, being one of the five returned as Democrats in that year when the Democracy of Maine "went down into the valley and the shadow of death," he being the sole survivor. Two of his colleagues were William S. White and Fred R. Spear, both late of this city. He was elected register of deeds in 1910, was candidate for judge of probate in 1908 and 1922, declining renomination in 1926, was candidate for State senator in 1920, State inspector of dams and reservoirs for a period of more than 25 years and in 1907 was appointed commissioner to effect the copying of the Hancock records of Waldo lands.

He believes in upholding and enforcing the laws of the United States rather than allowing (or countenancing) them to be overrun by rebel gangs and cliques. He has no particular form of religious belief, believing that the entire concept of the universe with its dim, unknowable incomprehensible past, reaching back into the confines of eternity, and the equally mysterious and impenetrable realms of futurity render futile any attempts at solution by man during his brief flicker of existence; that each must formulate his own line of thought as suggested by what he finds about him, unless perchance he may elect to follow some of the many, many paths mapped out by others in the certainty of their own minds as to the course others should pursue.

Mr. Farrow married Dec. 2, 1888, Marianna Thurlow of Belfast, who died April 29, 1916, when he moved to Belfast. He came to Rockland in the spring of 1928.

He has one brother, Harrison Farrow, residing in Belfast.

The Boston flower show takes place this week, and will doubtless draw some local attendants. Held simultaneously is the Massachusetts Garden Club's annual spring exhibition at Mechanics hall, March 13-18. Prof. Manton Copeland of Bowdoin College will have an entry of mountain top plants (Alpine plants) for rock gardens. Other entries include a Chinese garden, a planting of rare azaleas, and a Swiss chateau, as well as a formal garden.

CALIFORNIA QUIETING DOWN

Losses Immense, But Wild Rumors Are Resented—Word From Our People Out That Way

Stricken Southern California is cleaning up its earthquake wreckage. Continuing shocks of lesser frequency and intensity helped shake down loosened bits of brick and parts of town buildings, as the yet incomplete survey indicated 116 dead, more than 1000 moderately and seriously injured, some 4000 more having had first aid treatment and from $54,000,000 to $75,000,000 damage done by Friday night's jolt.

With relief for the maimed, sick and hungry effectively and efficiently organized, and the whole area under control, authorities turned to alleviate the fear among the civilian populace in the area and their relatives and friends throughout the world.

Emphatic condemnation was voiced of those responsible for spreading ugly rumors after the first great shock last Friday night.

Knox County folks who had relatives in the earthquake zone have naturally been concerned.

Among the first to wire news of safety was William S. Healey, formerly of Rockland, who held the office of county treasurer when he went West eight or more years ago. The family is now located in Roscoe, near the town of Burbank.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Stearns of Park street were greatly relieved to receive a wire from their daughter, Mrs. Charles Grant (Naomi Stearns) Sunday, telling of her safety at Long Beach, Calif., where she now resides. Mrs. Grant's husband who is in the Navy, sailed only a few days prior to the earthquake for a two weeks' cruise to Honolulu.

Relatives and friends of Miss Olive E. Libby, who is now making her home at Los Angeles were much concerned until this telegram was received by her mother, Mrs. Ada Libby of Rockport, Saturday afternoon: "Severe earthquake Long Beach, lighter here. No damage to us."

Leon A. Chase has received word from his brother, Joseph Chase of Los Angeles, that he and his wife were uninjured.

Word has been received from San Pedro, Calif., of the safety of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schlendering (Bernice Davis of Rockland), also of Mrs. Schlendering's father, Elden Davis, whose home is in Los Angeles, and her brother, Gordon Davis, and aunt, Mrs. Fronia Closson who were in Hollywood at the time. Further details of the shock are expected later from them.

Mrs. Lillian S. Copping has received a letter from her son Cecil, whose home is in West Los Angeles, announcing that his family passed through the earthquake safely. They were together at home when the quake took place, and although it was felt severely, no considerable damage was done in that section. Otherwise than a restless night through anxiety, the family suffered no ill effects.

DR. EDWIN WILLIAM GOULD

Sudden Death Of Well Known Physician and Sportsman and Former Fish Commissioner

Dr. Edwin W. Gould, former commissioner of Sea and Shore Fisheries, and one of Maine's best sportsmen, died suddenly at his home on School street Sunday morning. He had made his usual rounds on the previous day, and apparently in his usual health, joked and chatted with friends, as was his wont.

Dr. Edwin William Gould was born in North Bucksport, May 27, 1854. His education was gained in the public schools and completed at the East Maine Conference Seminary.

At the age of eight, as the result of his investigations into the laws governing fish life, he completely stocked a neighboring brook with trout for the purpose of observing still more clearly the habits of the fish. Dr. Gould entered commercial life as a traveling salesman, representing a house in Bangor, for the sale of musical instruments, etc. A marked success in this line of work attracted the attention of the New England Organ Company, of Boston and a flattering offer secured for them the services of the young salesman, who was immediately entrusted to cover a "territory" embracing most of the States east of the Rocky Mountains. Mr. Gould's discharge of this responsible trust was highly satisfactory to his employers.

But no success in business could divert the Maine boy from the goal of his ambition, the profession of medicine, and "Gray's Anatomy" was as constant a part of his traveling bag as his order book. By diligent reading in railway cars, between stations, and in the other intervals of business, Mr. Gould fitted himself, unassisted, to enter the medical department of Bowdoin College in 1885, where, by the same diligence and enterprise, he succeeded in mastering the three years' course in two years, graduating as doctor of medicine in 1887. He practiced his profession in Swanville, Searsport, Thomaston and this city.

The doctor never lost his interest in fish culture, or the instincts of a true sportsman, which enabled him to realize clearly that in the preservation of her fish and game lies much of the financial prosperity of the State. In recognition of his fitness for the work, he was, in 1891, appointed by Gov. E. C. Burleigh, Commissioner of Sea and Shore Fisheries. He succeeded in imbuing his wards with his own spirit, and the laws were enforced without favoritism, but with thoroughness. Largely by the personal exertions of the Commissioner, a coast patrol boat was added to the equipment of the State in this important work. In the fight against the "Lapham Bill," Dr. Gould stood forward as the champion of the rights of the States to control their local fisheries against the centralizing tendencies of the National Fish Commissioner, and his success in this memorable contest attracted national attention, not only to the State, but to her efficient Commissioner.

Each season found Dr. Gould at the famous Bangor salmon pool, in late years unflinching with his boon companion John L. Thomas, and their record was always the envy of other fishermen. Dr. Gould had also hunted buffalo on the western plains and owned a fine specimen of a mounted buffalo head. His abundant good nature made him a general favorite.

He was twice married, first in 1883 to Mary E. Lincoln of Mansfield, Penn. He is survived by his second wife, Carrie H. Gould.

Rev. E. O. Kenyon will officiate at the funeral services at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

LIVESTOCK PERISHED

When the William Small Slaughter House On Park Street Was Burned

The glow from a large fire in the rear of the city was seen by Patrolman Charles H. Emery early yesterday morning. Impressing into service the first car he saw, Emery rode to the scene and sent in an alarm from box 41.

The burning structure was the slaughter house on upper Park street operated by William W. Small of 34 Fulton street. It was doomed when the officer discovered the blaze, but the department was quickly on hand to assure the protection of adjoining property. Sparks landed on the roof of Clarence Knowlton's house, but were promptly extinguished.

Six cows and two calves perished in the flames, and Mr. Small's losses, which run into several thousand dollars, also included hides, wool, hay, dressed meat, etc. He carried partial insurance.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

THE SOLITUDE OF ALEXANDER SELKIRK

I am monarch of all I survey; My right there is none to dispute; From the center all round to the sea I am lord of the fowls and the beasts. O Solitude! where are the charms That ages have seen in thy face? Better dwell in the midst of alarms Than reign in this horrible place.

I am out of humanity's reach. I must finish my journey alone. Never hear the sweet music of speech. I start at the sound of my own. The beasts that roam over the plain My form with indifference see. They are so unacquainted with man. Their tameness is shocking to me.

Society, Friendship, and Love, Divinely bestowed upon man, Oh, had I the wings of a dove. How soon would I taste you again! My sorrows I then might assuage In the ways of religion and truth, Might learn from the wisdom of age, And be cheered by the sallies of youth.

Ye winds that have made me your sport, Convey to this desolate shore Some cordial endearing report Of a land I shall visit no more: My friends, do they now and then send A wish or a thought after me? O tell me I yet have a friend, Though a friend I am never to see.

How fleet is a glance of the mind! Compared with the speed of its flight, The tempest itself lags behind. And the swift-winged arrows of light, When I think of my own native land In a moment I seem to be there; But alas! recollection at hand Soon hurries me back to despair.

But the sea-fowl is gone to her nest. The beast is laid down in his lair; Even here is a season of rest. And I to my cabin repair. There's mercy in every place, And mercy, encouraging thought! Gives even affliction a grace. And reconciles man to his lot. —William Cowper.

The Lord is good, a strong hold in the day of trouble; and He knoweth them that trust in Him.—Nahum 1:7.

Sixty thousand red paper Legion poppies were sent by truck Friday afternoon from the Legion Auxiliary work shop at the Veterans Administration Home at Togus to Old Town, where the State Legion Auxiliary secretary will have charge of their distribution. Forty thousand poppies are being sent out from the Home postoffice to Posts and units in Maine, in preparation for the May sale in the interests of rehabilitation and welfare work. The poppy shop closed last week. Sixty men were employed, with an average daily attendance of 55. The poppy makers who are disabled World War veterans, received one cent for each poppy and the total payroll was more than $1,000. This money means new clothes and shoes, fares home or a chance to go where a job awaits, to many disabled veterans. The Maine poppy shop will supply Vermont with poppies and will also furnish part of Delaware's allotment. The poppies this year are entirely different in construction from those of other years.

A pamphlet entitled "Symposium on Commercial Education," covering the Southern California Commercial Teachers' Association, April and October meetings, 1932, edited by Robert W. Messer of the John Marshall High School, Los Angeles, is interesting Rockland friends of Mr. Messer, a former resident, and the grandson of the late Robert W. Messer. The edition consists of a compilation of addresses delivered at the spring and fall conventions of the association, touching upon the Gregg System of shorthand, modern business letter writing, salesmanship, accounting, advertising, etc. The booklet contains 80 pages and is attractively made up. The careful editing by Mr. Messer has won many compliments, some of which have come from quite distant states.

The Castine Outboard Club, through its commodore, Thomas Wallace, has initiated efforts to have competition for State outboards recognized at approved regattas throughout Maine. The plan has been tried with signal success in other states. With their example in mind, Mr. Wallace states that the added incentive in racing will be reflected in a generally higher level of speeds. This should produce increased interest. Because the establishment of state outboard records presents no difficulties of consequence, and because the advantages are so obvious, it is hoped that such records will be recognized this summer.

The new magazine devoted to interests of the Maine Nurses' Association and planned and edited by members promises to be a practical aid to those devoted to the nursing profession. The first publication will be issued April 1, in Augusta, the editorial staff being headed by Mrs. Marion Fox Oakes, R.N., of that city. Representing the western district and acting as associate editor, Mrs. Marion T. Gray of Woodford, will look after that section, and others of the State editor's staff will be Mrs. Alice C. Hayward, Eastern Maine General Hospital, Bangor, and Miss Margaret Pearson, Central Maine Hospital, Lewiston.

So much interest is being shown in the public open forums of the Knickerbockers that next Sunday's meeting, 12 to 1, will be transferred to American Legion hall. William H. Deering, director of the budget in Maine, will be the speaker and will have for his subject "Present Financial Conditions." It is a subject in which everybody has a vital interest, and all men are invited. Last Sunday the Knickerbockers discussed the method of setting up the constitutional convention—a subject with which Legislature is still wrestling.

Will Rogers is to address the Baptist Men's League Thursday night. Not the mayor of Beverly Hills, to be sure, but the man who is called the Will Rogers of Maine. It is also possible the committee may furnish another entertainer who has made a decided hit hereabouts.

THE ECONOMY BILL

Moran Votes For Presidential Measure Which Would Made Drastic Cuts

President Roosevelt's economy bill which would permit the Chief Executive to make drastic cuts in federal wages and veterans' compensation passed the House Saturday by a vote of 266 to 138.

The opposition was led by insurgent Democratic forces, which refused at a party caucus earlier in the day to be bound to support the President in his proposal to bring about economies to balance the Federal budget and restore the Nation's credit.

The Maine delegation—Beady, Rep., Moran, Dem., and Uitterback, Dem., voted for the bill.

Jasper McKenney and family are temporarily occupying rooms at the home of his father, Charles McKenney.

Frank Priest has announced his candidacy for the office of third selectman. Bert Gregory, the present incumbent, is also a candidate. It is also understood that Arthur K. Walker, first selectman, and Albert Rhodes, second, will be candidates for re-election.

W. A. Paul who has been ill the past week is reported as improving.

The Thursday evening prayer meeting at the Methodist Church will be omitted this week owing to the last quarterly conference of the year which takes place Wednesday evening with Rev. A. I. Oliver of the Augusta District presiding. This conference will be preceded by a church-night supper at 6:30.

Town meeting is the chief subject of conversation on the street at the present time. The books for the past year have been closed, showing a credit balance of over $900. A warrant of 68 articles has been prepared and at a meeting at Town hall Saturday evening was submitted to the committee of 12 citizens appointed to make recommendations on same. It is anticipated that a saving of $8000 or more will be made on the budget for the coming year. Another meeting has been called for March 18 at 7:30 p. m. at which all interested citizens are requested to be present. A discussion of the various articles will take place, giving the voters an opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with them before voting on March 20.

People who feel the need of a dictator always vision him as dictating to somebody else.—Mobile Register.

"ON MY SET"

Many persons have asked me about Howell Cullinan, who gives the Boston Globe news flashes at 8:30 a. m. and 12:15 p. m. Unfortunately my acquaintance with this popular broadcaster is limited to personal correspondence, but after much persuasion he has yielded to my requests for a portrait, and the above picture shows him in front of his beloved microphone. It is a profile view to be sure, but the listener is now able to visualize the man to whom he listens so religiously on the hours above mentioned.

An outline sketch of "Cutty" appeared in this column at the time he entered upon his seventh year of broadcasting service—"never absent and never tardy." We like him because of the human touch always to be found in his broadcasts; because of the note of sympathy which always creeps in when his news is sad; and because of the "laugh" which is in his voice when there is a humorous story which he tells so well. So here's a continuation of best wishes always bestowed by "On My Set," and its great host of readers. When he speaks may the static always be less.

Representative James W. Wadsworth, who broadcast from a New York station Saturday night was introduced as "already being considered for the Republican presidential nomination in 1936."

I had scarcely expected to tune in on a California station Saturday night, but KNX of Hollywood was in action as though the southern part of the great Pacific Coast State had not that day been terrorized by earthquakes. Castle Post, American Legion was being ordered to report at Patriotic hall, and word was being given out that all the churches would be open except at Long Beach, where the blighting effect of the temblor was greatest.

News from Boston and news from Omaha, Neb., were coming in on the same wavelength Saturday night and could both be distinctly heard if one's ears were "quick" enough. The station's were WEEI and WOW, and the newspapers were the Boston Globe and Omaha World.

It was Edith Barrett who was seen in "East Lynn" at Lakeside last season, and not Edith Byron, as the types made it appear.

Cincinnati and Moscow are showing the way to super power in broadcasting, with each city engaged in the construction of a 500,000-watt station. Russia already has five stations of 100,000 watts, but the highest powered station at present in North America is the 75,000-watt transmitter of XER at Villa Acuna, Mex. Dr. John R. Brinkley, American backer of XER, has indicated he is considering boosting this power to 500,000 watts and already has secured a permit to do so from the Mexican Government.

In view of this American development the Russians, who are determined to head the procession in radio power, announce that their next undertaking will be a super station of 1,000,000 watts.

KNOX COUNTY TOWN MEETINGS

CAMDEN

Nearly 1000 voters passed into the booths yesterday to indicate their choice of town officers. The result was entirely satisfactory to the Republicans who elected three of the five selectmen. The winners were: A. V. Elmore, R., 490; Fred A. Packard, R., 469; Frank Blood, R., 459; Ernest Rice, D., 427; Charles T. Swan, D., 408. The total sum carried by the appropriations is $117,857.89 as compared with $128,126.42 for the previous year.

UNION

The veteran moderator Herbert L. Grinnell was again at the helm and town meeting was held with accustomed smoothness. It goes without saying that the voters re-elected Clarence Leonard, the efficient town clerk.

H. L. Grinnell, W. C. Perry and M. R. Miller were elected selectmen, assessors and overseers of poor, Mr. Perry winning a one-sided contest for second place over J. B. Blake. The selectmen will also serve as road commissioners. Roy Gould was elected tax collector and Lawrence I. Morton member of the school committee.

These appropriations were made: Common and High Schools, $4000. Repairs on schoolhouses, $300.

Text books and incidentals, $700. Support of poor, $1500. Roads and bridges, $3000, plus amount received from excise tax. Maintenance of State aid roads, $276.

It was voted to discontinue the three schools whose pupils are now attending the new building, and to sell the abandoned buildings. The town will remain on standard time.

The motion to recommend that the school committee employ only unmarried women teachers and graduates of Normal Schools was voted down. The total appropriations were $16,452, not including State and county taxes. This is a reduction of about $1950 from last year.

HOPE

Two contests for positions on the board of selectmen, assessors and overseers of the poor furnished the chief excitement. First place on the board went to M. H. Bowley without contest. Everett N. Hobbs, opposed for second selectman won out in the ratio of two to one, while H. E. Hardy had a narrow victory for third selectman over C. H. Robbins.

Other town officers chosen were: Moderator—M. B. Hobbs. Clerk—Mrs. Ina Taylor. School committee—Mrs. Ethel Pearce.

Sexton—H. B. Coose. Tax Collector, Treasurer and Constable—R. O. Barrett.

The selectmen will act as road commissioners. The year's budget comprises these appropriations:

Common schools, $2600. Repairs on school building, $100. Support of poor, $1000. Road patrol maintenance, $300. Cutting bushes, $200. Roads and bridges, $2000. Snow bills, $300. Town officers, $600. Street lights, $100. Control of white pine blister rust, $50. Snow fence, $100. State aid road, $1066. Outstanding notes, $1000. Town expenses, $175. Third class road maintenance, $450. This wage scale was adopted: Men, $2.50 a day; teams and men, $5; trucks and drivers, $9.

CUSHING

The purse strings did not loosen easily yesterday, and the result was a budget so greatly reduced that there are already hints of a special town meeting to vote additional funds.

These town officers were chosen: Moderator—Bert F. Geyer. Clerk—William B. Holder. Selectmen and Overseers of Poor—Silas E. Hyler, Dewey L. Maloney and Fred A. Robinson. Assessors—Silas E. Hyler, Nelson F. Spear and Fred A. Robinson. Treasurer—Bert F. Geyer. School Committee—Silas E. Hyler, Dewey F. Maloney and Nelson F. Spear.

This wage scale was fixed—Double teams and man, $5; trucks and driver, $8; men, $2.50.

FRIENDSHIP

Several contests enlivened the annual town meeting session, which was ably presided over by R. L. Thompson. R. R. Collamore was elected town clerk.

Five candidates appeared in the field for selectmen and overseers of the poor, the winners being Riley Bradford, Alfred H. Morton and Charles H. Stenger. Melvin Lawry and L. B. Davis, members of last year's board failed of re-election.

The contest for road commissioner called forth the largest vote, Levi P. Noyes defeating B. A. Murphy and Albert W. Morton. John L. Stevens, fire warden for a number of years, was defeated by Meritand Simmons.

Other town officers elected were: Assessors, Riley Bradford, W. A. Bradford and Alfred H. Morton; school committee, Byron Burns; treasurer, L. C. Morton; constables, John L.

Stevens and Stanley Poland; weigher of ice, A. Dwight Wotton; mothers' aid, Lena Davis; building inspector, J. L. Stevens; tax collector, John D. Mitchell.

The appropriations, which are about $3500 less than last year, were: Town officers and incidentals, $1600. Bridges, $185. Fifty-fifty road, $50. Snow account, $300. Patrolman, $250. Street Lights, $408. Sidewalk, $30. Poor Relief, $2500. Veterans' Aid, $800. Common Highway, $500. Third Class Maintenance, $213. Fire Department, $125. Interest, $350. Library, $75. Schools, $4000. High School tuition, $500. School Lights and Insurance, $175. School Physician, $40. Public Health Nurse, $66.

VINALHAVEN

Leslie B. Dyer, as moderator, handled yesterday's town meeting with accustomed skill, and of course there was no dissenting voice when it came to re-electing that veteran clerk, Owen P. Lyons.

Charles L. Boman had no opposition as first selectman. Ernest Arey defeated David Duncan for second, and Mrs. Margaret Chiles won over George McDonald for third.

There was also a contest for traffic officer, Percy A. White defeating Herbert Morton. Other officers elected were:

School Committee—Mrs. Elizabeth Barton. Treasurer—L. W. Sanborn. Auditor—John Lowe. Fire Chief—G. C. Peaslee. Road Commissioner—Warren J. Billings.

The election of a tax collector was left with the selectmen.

These appropriations were made:

From the school building fund now on deposit is to be taken $3187 to be used to reduce total assessment of taxes. A vote of thanks was given the

ALFRED C. YOUNG

The town of Rockport loses another old time resident in the death of Alfred C. Young at South Eliot, March 11, at the age of 79 years. He was the last but one of a family of five children of Joseph and Julia (Kendall) Young, the others being Judson Young of Boston, Artemus and Almatia Gregory of Glen Cove and Aldenia Simonton of Rockland.

He spent his young days on the farm and for a time was employed in Boston with his brother Judson in the wholesale produce business. Returning to Glen Cove he engaged in farming and teaming. He was much interested in horses, poultry and cattle, and kept the best. His many teams of horses hauled lumber, in Rockland and Rockport, and were the envy of many a team-owner, especially those in Rockport when he hauled ice from the Lily Pond to the ice houses and vessels at the wharves, in the palmy days of the ice business. No others could haul a larger load. Poorly fed or poorly kept animals never stood in his stable.

To engage more extensively in farming and be nearer to a large market he moved in 1903 to Yarmouth, and later to South Eliot, where he bought a farm and engaged in dairy general farming, in which he continued until his health prevented. His wife, who was Cora Burrows of Rockville died in South Eliot. He was later married to Mrs. Phillips of Barnstead, N. H., who survives him. He is also survived by his brother Judson and a daughter, Mrs. Forest Leach and his grandchildren, Raymond Andrews and Helen Leach of South Eliot.

He was a great lover of children and many of the middle generation at Glen Cove will remember how he engaged in sports with them. The interment will be in South Eliot.

The Kickapoo opened Penobscot River to navigation Sunday breaking the ice from Winterport to Bangor. The up-river folks gave her a warm welcome. The "Kick" is very popular up that way, as well as at Rockland. Yesterday she departed for Boston on official business.

MRS. LIBERALE PALADINO

The community was greatly shocked yesterday to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Liberaie Paladino, who was a victim of heart attack at her home on Orient street.

The deceased was a daughter of Jeremiah and Mary (Hanrahan) Sullivan and was 55 years of age on her last birthday, in November. She was married 23 years ago to Mr. Paladino, who had been a resident of this country since 1890. Their union was blessed by the arrival of two children, Mary and Liberaie, Jr., both of whom are prominent and active in Rockland High School.

Pride in her family, devotion to it, and loyalty to her church (St. Bernard's) were strongly featured in Mrs. Paladino's career. Her kindness to everybody, coupled with her sympathy for the afflicted also served to endear her to friends.

Besides her husband and children, Mrs. Paladino is survived by one sister, Mrs. Mary (Sullivan) Mitchell of Quincy, Mass.; and two brothers, Jere Sullivan of Dorchester, and Eugene Sullivan of Philadelphia. Mrs. Paladino's maiden name was Margaret E. Sullivan.

The funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning. Interment in Thomaston.

MRS. MARTHA SPEAR

Mrs. Martha D. Spear died March 7 at her home on upper Pleasant street, aged 81 years. She had been failing for some months, but her final illness confined her to her bed only four days.

The funeral services were held last Friday, Rev. G. H. Welch officiating. The bearers were Eugene F. Lyddie, Colby Moore, James T. Cates and James S. Derby. The interment was in Achorn cemetery.

Mrs. Spear was born and always lived in the community where death occurred. She was a daughter of Ephraim and Adolphus (Dean) Ulmer, and the widow of William N. Spear, who 45 years ago lost both arms in a quarry accident, and who died 15 years ago. Her devotion to her crippled husband, and the constant care which she exercised over him, was but one of the many traits for which she will be so tenderly remembered.

ILLUSION:

A large packing case is exhibited on a raised platform. A young woman climbs into the box. Head, hands and feet protrude, and are held by spectators while the magician takes a crosscut saw and, with the help of an assistant, saws through the center of the box and apparently through the woman.

EXPLANATION:

There are many explanations for this illusion. One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of two girls in the box. One girl curls up in the left half of the box with her head and hands protruding, giving the effect you see illustrated above. The other girl is doubled up in the right half of the box, with only her feet showing. Nobody is sawed in half.

It's fun to be fooled —
 ...it's more fun to KNOW

Cigarette advertising, too, has its tricks. Consider the illusion that "Flavor" can be achieved by some kind of magical hocus-pocus in manufacturing.

EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring. The blending of various tobaccos. And the quality of the tobaccos themselves.

Quality is by far the most important. Domestic cigarette tobaccos vary in price from 5¢ a pound up to 40¢ a pound. Imported tobaccos vary from 50¢ a pound to $1.15.

No wonder, then, that cigarettes differ in taste—since distinctive, pleasing flavor depends so largely upon the blending of the costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels. Give your taste a chance to sense the subtle difference that lies in costlier tobaccos... a difference that means all the world in smoking pleasure... in pure, unalloyed satisfaction.

The MAY DAY MYSTERY

By Octavus Roy Cohen

Reagan relaxed as the story finished. He glanced at the prodigious detective to see what effect it had made. Hanvey was lying back in his chair with eyes half closed, apparently oblivious to everything. And when he spoke it was in a casual—almost disinterested—voice; and about something else.

"Who did you like best, Mike—Vernon or Thayer?"

Carmicino did not hesitate.

"Meester Thayer, sir. I like him most best."

"Why?"

The swarthy face turned brick red, but the man did not evade.

"I like Meester Thayer best, sir, because I feel like him and me, we are partners."

"Huh? What you mean: Partners?"

"I mean . . . I do not like to say this, sir, because you are policeman, but I promise to tell the truth, Meester Thayer and me, we do much business with each other."

"What sort of business?"

"Whisky."

Reagan sat up very straight. This was something entirely new to him.

"You mean," asked Jim, "that Thayer was a bootlegger?"

Carmicino made a gesture of horror.

"Oh, no, sir. Meester Thayer, he is one fine feller. He only get the orders and I buy the whisky for him. It is me which are the bootlegger." He paused for a moment in obvious embarrassment, and then made a further explanation. "But I am not common bootlegger, Mr. Hanvey. I get whisky only for the college fellers, and always I am careful that it is good stuff."

Jim Hanvey appeared to be absorbed in the mechanism of his patent toothpick. His eyes were focussed on that device when he spoke again to Carmicino.

"Are you a regular bootlegger, Mike?"

"Oh, no, sir. I would not do nothing like that—only for the college fellers." The janitor's eyes flashed to Reagan's stern face. "I hope I do not get to jail because I tell you that, sir."

"You won't," promised Hanvey.

"Will he, Reagan?"

"Whatever you say, Chief."

Hanvey pursued his inquiry.

"How was this liquor thing worked, Mike?"

"It was theesaway, Meester Hanvey: Always sometimes the boys give a party which the faculty they do not understand about, so they want liquor. Meester Thayer, he says he knows where he can get real stuff which has never been cut. So they give him the money and he orders it from me."

"I see. . . And you and he would split the difference, eh?"

"Yes, sir. For real thing, the fellers they pay me one hundred dollars a case. I pay for it sixty dollars a case, and Meester Thayer he take twenty dollars and I take twenty dollars."

"Then you were close friends, eh?"

"Oh, no, sir. Meester Thayer, he is ver' fine gentleman and he would not be friends with no janitor."

"I see. . . He certainly was a fine gentleman, Mike—no mistake about that. Thayer and Vernon were pretty good friends, weren't they? Did you ever hear them quarrel?"

"No, sir. Not one time even."

"They used to play cards a good deal, didn't they?"

"Maybe so—maybe not. I think maybe so."

"Vernon never mixed up in this liquor business, did he?"

"No, sir. Just Mr. Thayer."

"Hm! What was the last time you bought liquor for him?"

"Let me see. . . about one week ago, sir. It was a nice party. They wanted two cases."

"Two hundred dollars' worth?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you get it?"

"Oh, yes, sir."

"Did Thayer pay for it?"

"Right away quick, sir, all except the forty dollars which he keeps for himself."

"Did Thayer usually pay you, when he ordered the whisky or only after the boys paid him?"

"After the fellers they pay him. You see, it is for them and so he should not pay me until he get the money off them."

"And when he died, Mike—did he owe you anything?"

"No, sir. Meester Thayer, he did not owe me one cent."

"Good." Hanvey hoisted himself to his feet, and nodded to the janitor. "That'll be all, Mike."

"You do not ask me no more questions?"

"Nope. Nothing else, I'm much obliged for everything."

"Thank you, sir."

Reagan led the way into the hall and thence upstairs to the main floor.

"What you see, Vernon? Would you like to see Max Vernon's room?"

"You've searched it, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Find anything?"

"Not a thing. But I thought—"

"My Gosh! you're a thorough bird. Well, let's go. But Lord! how I hate those steps."

Hanvey panted to the top floor and Reagan conducted him into a small but handsomely furnished room, resplendent with pennants, pillows, tennis rackets and numerous lithographs depicting pulchritudinous damsels in various conditions of deshabille.

But despite the markedly collegiate tone, there was more than a hint of taste in the general arrangement. In a corner was a delicate statuette perched on a teakwood tabouret. And over the mantel was a collection of curious weapons: a fencing foil, a broadsword, a Malay kris, an Arab scimitar, a rusty revolver of Civil war days, a Philippine bolo, a bow and arrow of genuine Indian origin. Hanvey glanced at them, and then at the arrangement of the room.

It was cozy, in a youthful, happy-go-lucky sort of way. Hanvey casually opened the dresser drawers and rummaged indifferently through the masses of expensive linen. He opened the door of the hanging closet and exclaimed over the multitude of tailored suits disclosed.

"Vernon sure must be a snappy dresser, John."

"Looked that way to me," answered Reagan enviously. "I always did wish I could afford them kind of clothes. I'll bet there ain't a suit in yonder that cost less'n a hundred bucks."

Hanvey sank into a chair and lighted a cigar. "Ain't it tough to think of a kid like Vernon having it easy like he did and then getting mixed up in a nasty mess like this?"

"You tell 'em, Jim. That's one reason I was glad to get you on the case. They're a nice sort, these kids. I didn't used to think so. I thought they were a bunch of crazy high-hats, but, by golly! they ain't. I haven't met a one who didn't strike me that he'd be a real guy if he wasn't so damn' educated."

Hanvey moved his head laboriously toward the mantel.

"What's all the military equipment?" he asked, referring to the knives and swords on the wall.

"I asked about that," said Reagan. "It seems Vernon has traveled a good deal and he's sort of collected these things. That funny-looking one is from where the Malays live. I think they call it a kris. And that one over the clock is a bolo, or whatever it is the Filipinos use. Vernon was a nut about 'em."

"Funny bunch. . . But at that I guess it's more sensible than collecting stamps or art things." He

COULD NOT GET A NIGHT'S REST

Tired Every Morning—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her to Sleep

"I could not get a good night's sleep for over twelve months. Every morning I was very tired. Since I took the Vegetable Compound, I sleep much better, and get through my work more easily. I am sixty-one years old and I look after a sixteen-room rooming house beside doing the cooking for my self and husband."—Mrs. A. HALL, WELL, 517 So. Main St., Fall River, Mass.

plinked. "You've looked all through the room, John?"

"Everywhere. I'm sure I didn't miss a thing."

"You never can tell. . . Just to make sure, though, we'll make one more search."

Reagan started with the dresser. He rummaged through the drawers and into every corner. He inspected every ornament and spot of dust on the mantel. He looked behind pennants and pictures which were tacked on the wall.

He opened the door of the hanging closet, where he commenced a systematic search into every pocket of every suit of clothes.

It was a tedious job and Reagan—glancing occasionally into the room—was quite sure that Hanvey's suggestion for a new search had not been entirely without ulterior motives.

The prodigious body was settled snugly into the big chair; the pudgy hands were folded contentedly across the massive mezzanine and Jim Hanvey was—or far as the naked eye could discern—sleeping superbly.

Sleeping! Or was he? The longer Reagan was with Hanvey the less he understood the big man. At times he appeared to be obtuse, at times brilliant—and at times just plain dumb. Reagan returned to his task. If Hanvey wanted a search he'd darn well get one. Reagan had been over every inch of the ground before. . . but he was determined to do this job as thoroughly as he had the first.

And then the silence of the room was shattered by a sharp cry from the closet.

Hanvey's eyes uncurtained slowly, but he exhibited no other excitement—even when Reagan leaped into the room holding something gluggerly between his thumb and forefinger.

"Good G—d, Chief—look here."

Jim eyed the trophy curiously.

"Dug zone. . . It's a knife. And there's blood on it, too. Where'd you find it, John?"

"In the corner of the closet. On the floor. I—I don't understand, Jim—because I looked there day before yesterday. . . He was more excited than he cared to show. "But we've got something here, Chief—no matter if I did overlook it before. With this, it ought to be plain sailing."

"How come, John?"

"Because," snapped Reagan triumphantly—"that is the knife that killed Thayer, and Chief—I've got another idea."

"Good for you, John. What is it?"

Reagan stepped swiftly to the mantel. He designated a spot on the wall where the papering was a lighter color.

"Unless I'm all wrong, Hanvey," he said—"this knife belongs right in that spot. And if it does—there ain't much question but that Max Vernon is the man who used it."

House Boat Colony Makes Life Holiday

Monroe, La.—Life is just one long holiday for a hundred Red colonists who have banded in house boats on the Ouichita river here to sit out the depression. They have found Utopia in almost the true sense. There are fourteen boats, each comfortably equipped with a bed or two, some chairs, a stove and a few dishes. They spend their days fishing. There is no social caste, no unemployment. There are fish enough for all.

"They are the happiest people in the world," declares Mrs. C. W. Perkins, Jr., of the Monroe unemployment relief bureau, after she inspected the settlement.

Fish are the food supply, and fish are the basis of the system of barter. They are neighborly folk. Visitors from town are always welcome.

OUR JUNIOR PUZZLE

HOW OLD ARE YOU?

Bessie was asked how old she was and although she is a little girl she took her crayon and drew the right number on it in a large plain hand. If you want to see what she is writing, take your pencil and join all the numbered together, starting with dot number one, and ending with dot number twenty-five.

Traveling Around America

THE manifold problems of the machine age, which have brought universal unemployment in their wake, are almost completely unknown in one part of the world. It is a section of the globe in which machines do not and may never replace man-power, and in which man-power is in no frantic hurry to exhaust itself completely to the dubious blessings of mass production.

This utopia of the technocrats is not to be found only in the remotest mountains of the distant East, but in our amiable little neighbors to the South, under the Southern Cross. Central America, visited in the weekly cruises between New York and California by way of the Panama Canal, holds to the customs and ways of an older time, and finds them much to its liking.

In Guatemala villages and rural sections, no huge white milk trucks go thundering through the streets and roads with cans and bottles bouncing and rattling. Instead, the native vendors of leche go from house to house with their supply of fresh milk on their backs. Their "trucks" are unique carry-alls of woven hemp, usually featured in pretty designs and colors. The vendors ring no bells nor do they honk horns to make their presence known—they cry their wares in musical cadences, which fit into the scene of leisure and peace.

Although they live in a land of material plenty, where the weather is always kind, the natives are lively and industrious. They occupy themselves in the making of gay scarves and aprons which American travelers eagerly buy as souvenirs, and in fashioning pottery in the colors and designs of the ancient Mayas. In the making of their wares they employ no modern machines, which would do the work a hundred times faster, but cling to the hand loom and pottery wheel.

NICARAGUA HAS NEW RAIL LINE TO SEA

Outlet for Products From Mountainous Interior.

Washington.—With the opening of a 17-mile railroad between San Jorge, on Lake Nicaragua, and San Juan del Sur, on the Pacific ocean, Nicaragua now has a second rail outlet to the sea for coffee, cattle, sugar, and other products raised in its mountainous interior.

The new line pierces the Continental divide at one of its lowest points and cuts diagonally across the route of the proposed Nicaraguan canal, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "At its narrowest point this strip of land between Lake Nicaragua and the Pacific is about 14 miles wide. The railway parallels the route of a stage-coach line that in 1849 carried hundreds of prospectors to the California gold rush."

"Nicaragua also has come into world news lately with the gradual withdrawal of forces of American marines, who have been maintaining law and order in the former revolution-torn nation."

"Nicaragua is the largest of the Central American republics and many acclaim it the most beautiful. It has vast forests of precious woods, untold resources of valuable minerals and soil so fertile that it has been said, 'If you tickle the ground with a hoe it smiles back with a yam.'"

"After a century of almost perpetual civil war Nicaragua has settled down to comparative peace in recent years and already has begun to reap the dividends in amazing progress toward prosperity."

Has Lacked Atlantic Doorway.

"The country has about the same area as New York state, but its total population is only a little larger than that of Pittsburgh, Pa. It has two mountain ridges which nearly inclose the 'Great Lakes of Central America,' Lakes Nicaragua and Managua. There is also another railway line connecting its three chief cities—Managua, the capital, Leon and Granada—with the Pacific port of Corinto."

"A glance at a Central America map tells the story of Nicaragua's backwardness in bygone days. Costa Rica, to the south, and Honduras, to the north, are accessible from the Atlantic ocean; all of Nicaragua's important cities are near the Pacific, although they stand on the long Atlantic watershed. At the foot of the mountains lie her lakes, but she presents to the Caribbean a very unprepossessing 'back yard,' with the world's worst real estate designation, the Mosquito coast."

"Today, with Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle to tap her markets, Nicaragua's Pacific frontage is a blessing. But yesterday, when the Atlantic ports of North America and Europe were doing the world's shipping, she was severely handicapped."

Named for Indians.

"Curiously, too, her Mosquito coast was appropriately named by error. The appellation was not intended for the insect, which abounds there, but is a corruption of the name of the 6,000 Indians, the Misskitos, whose descendants make up most of the population of the region."

"The country's northernmost Caribbean headland, Cape Gracias a Dios, is a headline of geography. Columbus explored the Central American coast on his last voyage and, cruising east from Cape Honduras, was compelled to take shelter from a storm at a point where the coast abruptly turns to the south. He named the cape 'Thanks to God' and took possession of the country for Spain."

"That was in 1502. A century before the Mayflower touched at Plymouth Rock, the Spaniards were established along the lake region in far western Nicaragua, despite unwelcome volcanic outbursts. The most sensational single eruption, however, occurred within a century from our day—when Coseguina blew off its head in 1835. For days a black pall obscured the sun, dust blanketed the fields and forests, and animals died by the thousands, succumbing to thirst and hunger.

"At the foot of Mount Masaya is a lake of that name, and near the lake is the little town of Masaya. Were it not so remote one might suspect the writer of a once popular American song had stolen the cry of the women fruit vendors who drone:

"I have oranges, papayas, jocotes, Melons of water, of gold, and zapotes. Will you buy?"

"But Nicaragua also has bananas—she exports between a million and two million dollars' worth yearly. Only one other crop nets her more. It is coffee."

St. Louis Zoo Has Four Nice Buffalo for Sale

St. Louis.—Unless the St. Louis zoo officials find buyers for four buffalo they want to sell for $75 each the zoo workers are going to have a feast on buffalo meat. Officials said that the zoo is overstocked with buffalo and if they can't sell the animals they will be slaughtered and a banquet tendered the workers.

Famous Old Mines Are Reopened in Wyoming

Saratoga, Wyo.—Operations have been resumed at the Alma and Meta mines in the Sierra Madre range, southwest of Saratoga, after many years' idleness. The mines were the first patented claims in the region, but had not been worked for nearly 20 years until last spring, when they were leased by O. C. Johnson, a veteran miner. A carload of ore which ran largely to lead content, but which also assayed some gold and silver, was shipped recently to a Utah smelter.

Pussy Walks 21 Miles for a Chicken Dinner

Luray, Va.—A Luray resident decided to get rid of his cat when it developed gastronomic fondness for chickens.

Shunning the sack and stone method of disposal, he took the cat in his automobile 21 miles across the mountains, and left it.

Forty-eight hours later the cat came back, tired, hungry—and looking for more chickens.

STEAMSHIPS SLOWLY GIVE UP TO MOTORS

Crisis Facing Merchant Marine Is Increasing.

Washington.—"The Decline and Fall of American Shipping" might well be the secondary title for a volume just issued by the bureau of navigation and steamboat inspection of the Department of Commerce which traces the entire shipping industry from 1787 to 1932.

The rapid increase in sailing vessels and their decline, giving way to similar increase and decline in the number of steam vessels which are now giving way gradually to motor vessels, is a picturesque feature of the book.

Half-Million-Ton Start.

When Washington became President there were fewer than a half-million tons of merchant sailing vessels flying the American flag.

When Robert Fulton sent his Clermont flying up the Hudson by steam power in 1807 at an astounding speed which almost any boy today can duplicate on a velocipede, these half-million tons had increased to one and a quarter million. Then began in earnest the conflict between sail and steam, but sail held its own so that when the war with Mexico broke out in 1846-1847 sailing tonnage under the American flag was nearly two and a half million tons, or six times the steam total.

The clipper ship reached its proud peak in the '50s, when sailing tonnage afloat reached four and a half million tons, compared to three-quarters of a million steam tons.

The sailing ship began facing its defeat in earnest as the southern states yielded at Appomattox, and from then on the supremacy of sail over steam was definitely over.

The first commercial motor vessels appeared in 1893, the Aztec, and the Richard K. Fox. There are 12,000 today, but they are so small they do not increase the total tonnage.

Sailing Tonnage Drops.

When the World war began, the sailing tonnage had dropped to one and a quarter million tons, its status in 1807, with steam tonnage up to seven million tons. New ships authorized by congress during the war period doubled the steam tonnage, while sailing ships and motor vessels barely maintained their strength.

Today the merchant marine situation faces a crisis which has increased in recent years. Except for freight carrying transoceanic airships, or electrically-driven ships obtaining their current by wireless from land dynamos, modern ships see no competitor ahead offering the menace they did to the picturesque sailing vessels, but modern developments and economic conditions have brought about just as serious a situation as faced the clippers when the Clermont's wood-burning boilers flung their smoky challenge above the Hudson's palisades.

Legendary Vineta City Found in German Town

Berlin.—The legendary city of Vineta, which for centuries was believed to exist only in fiction, now has been located by a German professor.

Prof. Dr. Adolf Hofmeister of the University of Griefswald claims to have discovered the mysterious city of Vineta, once the thriving port of a mighty Baltic kingdom.

The little town of Wollin in Pomerania, the German professor states, is the spot where the ancient legendary city once was located. He bases his assertion on old chronicles, recently discovered by him.

According to these, Vineta, once was ruled by an old Viking king. In 1100 it was destroyed by the Danes, against whom the Vikings were carrying on a bloody war. The city was famous for its marvelous architecture and streets. It even is said to have possessed a lighthouse, the only one believed to have been in existence in the Eleventh century. The real name of the city was Jumneta. By the mistake of a chronicler who wrote its history, the name was changed to Vineta.

Professor Hofmeister is firmly convinced he has found the remains of the legendary city in Wollin. An expedition now has gone there to carry out excavation works.

Never Want to See Their Sons Again

Detroit.—Ordering prosecution of their two young sons to the limit of the law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Paul told authorities they never wanted to see the boys again.

The youths, William, eighteen, and Frank, fourteen, confessed taking a $35,000 holding off Paul's jewelry store with two other boys, William and Clarence Ray, also brothers.

"I have no sympathy left for them," Paul told police. "I'll help you."

"They are both bad boys and we never want to see them again. We only are afraid they will return to harm us when they get out of jail. Fifteen years would not be too much for them."

(Solution to Previous Puzzle)

APPLETON

We'll surely have one good storm for March, but the light snowfall that looked so wintry on the morning of March 9 soon vanished under the spell of sunshine and wind. Now the ground and roads look brown and bare.

Not an old "erow with an Englishman's bone in his mouth" but a whole family of crows with their raucous notes greeted the correspondent one morning last week. Also other spring birds sounded welcome notes.

The squirrels that have their nest here in the woodshed are very merry and busy these days. Evidently they are getting ready for the spring house-cleaning.

Friends in this place were very sorry to hear of the illness of Adella Vaez. Her writings are always enjoyed. Edward Ames and Bernice Beechey were Rockland visitors Tuesday and attended the movies.

Many aged people are passing away this winter, old friends and acquaintances.

Feeding House Plants and Porch Boxes

Plants grown in boxes and pots must obtain nourishment from a relatively small amount of soil. Naturally they soon exhaust the water and plant food available unless it is renewed.

To take care of this need soils used in pots and boxes should be in such physical condition as will enable them to hold large quantities of water. A soil compost of such nature may be made by mixing three parts of loam, one part of decomposed organic material, such as peat moss, composted material or leaf mold; and one part of sand or sifted coal ashes. If one prefers, good potting soil may be bought of a florist.

Physical condition of the soil has little to do with plant food content except that a friable soil is necessary for proper root growth, and such root growth makes possible the absorption of plant food. But a friable soil may still be unfruitful.

To assure an adequate supply of food in the soil, a complete plant food should be mixed with the soil before it is placed in the pot or box at the rate of one heaping tablespoonful per gallon of soil.

Plants established in pots or boxes should be fed at the rate of one level teaspoonful for a six-inch pot. For larger containers, apply plantfood at the rate of one level teaspoonful per square foot. Application should be made approximately every six weeks during the growing season. These directions refer to complete plantfood of balanced content and not too much slower acting organic materials.

Ribbed Crepe for Summer

New York-Paris Fashions

THIS youthful summer frock with its accompanying jacket which converts it into a many-duty ensemble is one of the newest models for summer. Suede Cord, a soft ribbed crepe made of Acele and silk, is the material used either in white or pastel shades, including pink, blue and other sun cloud hues.

Notable among the style features of the gown are the V neck, achieved through a button-over reverse, the short sleeves with a little cape-like ripple, and the straight skirt with inverted front pleats on a yoke.

WHITE HEAD COAST GUARD

[For The Courier-Gazette]
On a little rock-bound island.
There's a watcher night and day.
And no matter where your pathway leads.

He's there to help you on your way.
He belongs to a crew of watchers.
Ever listening for a call.
Always waiting there to help you.
Always ready one and all.

One is always in the tower.
And he never seems to sleep.
If you think that I'm mistaken.
Just you sometime take a peep.
When you know you are least expected.
There's the crew that make the cruiser.
With his phone stand at his elbow.
And his glasses on the coast.

Now among this band of hearties
There is one who takes the lead.
Yet he never tries to boss them.
There is never any need.
For you see, they all respect him.
And respect to love is kin.
They come to him like a father.
And he helps them work and win.

I have told you of the leader.
Of this band of happy men.
Now I must tell you of the others.
So have patience to the end.
There's the crew that make the cruiser.
Only know them just by sight—
Yet we value them sincerely.
For their slogan "right is might."

Then there's Randall in the kitchen.
And he looks so trim and neat.
When you see him start the fire.
That you want to stay and eat.
For you see, there's always something
Sure to please your palate most.
And you're sure of a hearty welcome—
Captain Mills is a genial host.

There's Surman Williams, as you know him.
But we always call him "Bill"—
If there's any way to help you.
You can wager Williams will.
There's another I would mention.
You will know him by his smile.
Though his name is logged Drinkwater.
We call him happy Lyle.

Then there's Hermie with his laughter.
And good nature without end—
We have watched him grow from boyhood.
And we're proud to call him friend.
There is one so stout and manly.
And I think you know his name.
For it's Grant so true and loyal.
Like the Grant of history's fame.

There's another I must speak of.
And I think I know him best.
For he bears the name of Ewell—
That I think explains the rest:
You will find you much about him.
But I'd weary you and so—
His first start in life I gave him.
So you see, I ought to know.

There are others just as noble
In this jolly, happy band.
Always ready, eager, waiting.
Just to give of heart and hand.
Just because I do not know them.
Yet they are heroes one and all.
White Head Coast Guard's always ready
Winter, summer, spring and fall.

And whenever the shadows lengthen
And the sun sinks to his rest.
The U. S. Coast Guards are ready
To serve those we love the best.

A WARREN ROAD

Neighbor To Thrifty Community Disputes a Town Meeting Statement

Warren, March 9.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

At our recent town meeting the statement was made that, "Practically no one lived on that part of the Waldoboro-Union road in Warren, which runs parallel with the Atlantic Highway and there was not traffic enough to call for the road being kept in repair," or words to that effect.

This statement was manifestly so unfair, that I wish to give the facts. Living on this road are six families, and on the road which joins this road at right angles, from what is locally called the "Hill" are six more families and these 12 families travel over the road in question.

Of these 12 families, six are either foreign born or of Finnish descent and have all lived here probably less than 12 years. Three of these six farms had been unoccupied for some time, previous to the present occupancy and I wish to state briefly what these six families are producing.

They have gradually built hen and chicken houses and worked into the poultry business, last year, buying 8000 chicks, keeping the pullets for layers. This year some are building more houses and increasing their flocks, having at present or soon to be delivered around 9900 chicks.

All farm buildings have been repaired, painted and put in fine shape. The poultry houses are well built of good material, concrete floors and painted.

All have cows, from enough to supply their own milk and butter, to those who sell to the creamery, whose truck passes through three times weekly, raising early garden truck marketed in Rockland, strawberries and blueberries, and beans and sweet corn for the canning factory.

All this farm produce and supplies must go over this road and I would like to compare this mile where these farmers live, with any other mile of farming section in the town. Much of the road work over the "Hill" is done without pay and when the town has made an appropriation, the money has been used to hire trucks and the men have given their time.

Through their efforts the Central Maine has built a branch line to their buildings and all are wired, so that when the hen houses are all lighted evenings, in addition to the dwelling houses and barns, they are noticeable for a long distance.

Budget Juggling Needed Today To Insure Full Calorie Count

Housewife Should Know Foods Essential to Balanced Diet

By Jane Rogers

THE housewife of today is much more likely to budget her expenses than the bride of fifty years ago. In those days it was only necessary to step into the garden and pluck a generous helping of fresh vegetables for the evening meal or stop by the smoke-house and procure a sizeable ham at a minimum of cost.

Today, the problem centers around making so many dollars purchase so many calories of food, so many articles of clothing and on through the whole line of living expenses.

Selection of foods is one of the most important considerations in budget making. Each member of the family needs a certain number of calories per day—varying according to the amount of manual work or labor indulged in and unless the housewife knows a little about the caloric value of foods there is great danger that her meals will be lacking in some of the most important elements which make up the well balanced diet.

With a market list showing prices and a calorie list, the housewife can work out a very interesting little problem in economical buying. A pound of butter contains 3600 calories and at the average price of twenty-five cents a pound it is possible to obtain 144 calories for one cent. A pound of bacon at twenty cents will furnish 140 calories for each cent; roast beef at twenty cents will furnish 47; macaroni at ten cents will give 165 while sugar at an average price of five cents a pound will furnish no less than 372 calories for each cent spent.

Because of the great number of calories it contains, sugar is one of the cheapest of all foods in addition to being one of the most valuable. It furnishes fuel which keeps the body engine burning, supplies much needed energy and its importance as a sweetener and flavorer, especially when used in the cooking of fresh or canned vegetables is universally recognized. "A dash of sugar and a pinch of salt" have become twentieth century household words.

Of course no one food can be used to the great exclusion of others even though it provides enough calories to meet the average demand but the housewife soon learns this and other little tricks that eventually lead to the preparation of well balanced and at the same time economical meals.

CONTRAST

for smart juniors

THE most original youthful styles go in for contrast in a big way. Fabrics, as well as colors, contrast and it's quite the thing to see organdie collars and bows, or plaid taffeta sleeves and collars featured. The clever use of a plaid plus a plain color, and a woolen plus a taffeta is shown in the illustration. (McCall 7235).

A high neckline, puff sleeves and buttons down the bodice front are other details which make this design an outstanding one. It has a grown-up quality that is sure to appeal to the jeune fille, yet its clever designing, gay colors and novel contrast create a charm that is decidedly young. THE REALM OF MUSIC

Gladys St. Clair Morgan

We always rejoice in the accomplishments, the successes and the joys of "our own," we read and hear about them with unflagging interest. Among those whom we call "our own" will always be Lottie McLaughlin—it's not easy for us who have known her so long to speak of her as Kitty, is it? Through interested friends we have learned of the success and joy Miss McLaughlin found in her recent visit of ten days in Augusta, Sanford and Portland, where her glorious voice gave delight not soon to be forgotten.

In the State of Maine concert given in conjunction with the Governor's reception at Augusta Miss McLaughlin was one of the most acclaimed artists, her beautiful voice, her finished style and her poised marking her as the "real artist." She was very handsome, dressed in chartreuse green lace with electric blue trimmings, worn with electric blue shoes. She was much enjoyed and admired at the reception following at the Blaine Mansion where "under the wing" of Senator and Mrs. A. C. McLoon she made many delightful contacts.

From Augusta Miss McLaughlin went to Sanford, Sunday evening, Feb. 26, she was a feature artist in a benefit concert for the Holy Family Church. It was a most successful affair, the Town hall being filled to the capacity limit—even every inch of standing room taken. Although the tickets were priced at the reasonable figures of 50 cents and 35 cents, $500 was taken—quite a staggering sum for a musical activity in these days. The review of the concert in the Sanford paper said of Miss McLaughlin:

"Goodbye, Summer," sung by Miss McLaughlin as an added number, was especially suited to her clear and very beautiful soprano voice. She was equally at home in both French and English songs, and turned with ease from the classical to the popular songs. Kreisler's "Old Refrain," with violin obligato by Mr. Bolduc, was interpreted with understanding by both artists. In "Pace, pace, mio Dio," from "La Forza del Destino" the range of Miss McLaughlin's voice was apparent, but in the "Italian Street Song" from "Naughty Marietta" she was at her best. Three beautiful bouquets were presented to Miss McLaughlin."

From Sanford Miss McLaughlin went to Portland where she was guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Huston, and where on Friday evening she sang at a special meeting of Rotarians and Rotary-Anns and where again she won her hearers by the beauty of her voice and art. Herbert Clark of Portland was her accompanist, and among the guests she met many who had heard her a few nights previous either in Augusta or Sanford. Later Friday evening Miss McLaughlin was heard from WCSH, singing "Pace, Pace, Mio Dio," "The Old Refrain," and "Goodbye, Summer." Although the hour was much later than first announced, due to inaugural broadcasts, Miss McLaughlin sang to a large audience, and at the close she was besieged with telegrams and telephone calls from Portland, Bangor and other Maine towns and cities. It was a happy occasion, and Miss McLaughlin's Rockland admirers were thrilled when her glorious voice came out of the air to them. While in Portland Miss McLaughlin was shown many social attentions.

Miss McLaughlin tells of the charming manner in which she was entertained in Augusta, particularly by Senator and Mrs. McLoon. She also tells of the popularity of the McLoons at the Capital, and of the stately appearance Mrs. McLoon made at the reception where she was among the ladies pouring. Mrs. McLoon wore olive green trimmed with kolinsky fur, which with her beautifully groomed white hair made a striking combination.

Miss Elizabeth Marsh, has given us this lovely tribute for Miss McLaughlin following her appearance in the recent patriotic meeting at the Park Theatre, singing in Victor Herbert's "Call to Freedom."

Upon a pedestal she stood,
Emblem of "White Sisterhood"—
Calm and serene,
A vision rare, a dream,
And lo! a silvery note
Bestirs the air.
As from the vision fair,
A voice is raised,
Triumphant in loud praise,
And falls upon the listening ear
A claxon call,
A message pure and clear,
It bids the sons of earth to pause
And strike for freedom's noble cause,
"Give heed, O sons of men,
Olive heed, lest ye forget
The Lord of hosts doth lead ye yet,
He e'er will keep
Our country safe,
Let her not sleep!"
Upon a pedestal she stood
And sang for righteous brotherhood.

Chatty Letter From Our Naturalist Tells of Affairs At "St. Pete"

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—
St. Petersburg, "the Sunshine City," noted for its green benches, sports of all kinds and churches, does more to entertain tourists than does any other city in Florida. Not only that, but St. Pete is the best located, on Tampa Bay and near the Gulf, and the best laid out, with its wide tree and flower-bordered streets and extra wide sidewalks, permitting of row upon row of green-benches, where the people from "all-over" sun themselves and exchange gossip, of any city in the State, if not in the United States.

Nineteen years ago I first landed from a Tampa steamboat in St. Petersburg. At that time it was only a town or small city, with no skyscrapers and few if any fine buildings. Central avenue ended at Ninth street. The Plaza theatre was just going up.

Now—Central Avenue, beautifully ornamented with palms and other trees, and brightly illuminated at night with street electric lamps, is extended straight on through Pasadena to Boca Ciega Bay; a fine open-air U. S. Postoffice building, artistically ornamented in colors; new Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. buildings; an Art Museum; a million-dollar recreation pier, the new Florida Theatre, a Carnegie Library building, fine, large High School and College buildings; many fine bank and business buildings, a fine yacht club-house—all go to make this an up-to-date modern city—as modern cities go!

But what appeals to the tourists, most of all are the recreation and sports facilities, provided by the city government. Williams Park, right in the very center of the city, with its free afternoon and evening band concerts and open forum; the horse-shoe, roque, bowling, and shuffleboard courts; the chess, checker and domino pavilion near the waterfront and the new chess pavilion at Mirror Lake, provide indoor facilities for patrons of these quieter, studious games. In 1913, Williams Park was the center for all the sports and games, excepting the shuffleboard, which had not at that time appeared on the scene.

Then, as now, I had my living quarters at Gulfport, with my dear old chess-friend, Reynolds (a field naturalist and graduate of Oxford University, England). I made a semi-weekly trip to "the city," and always headed straight for the chess-playing fraternity. Reynolds was then and for several years afterwards the chess champion. All the old chess players of those days, including Reynolds, Prof. Barry, and several others, whose names slip my memory, have departed this world, and sleep the long, eternal sleep. Not one of the old chess group do I see here now.

Some years later, when I went to Williams Park to play chess, Dr. Little principal of the High School, would be waiting and ready to pounce upon me! Never a word would he utter, but when he caught sight of me, he would beckon and point with his finger to a chess-board, and we were soon absorbed in the game—and what a tussle, of mind with mind, of attack and retreat, of deep-laid plots that came to naught!

And now, today, at the new pavilion with many new faces, new actors, the game goes on just the same. So many more players have arrived this winter that yesterday I caught the president with yard-stick in hand, measuring the building.

"What for?" said I.
"Why, we need more room, and the city fathers are going to enlarge the building for us."

Hurrah—great is chess!

My article in The Courier-Gazette of Jan. 5, "Down in Gulfport," in which I gave a pen-picture of the bird scene at Mirror Lake, and incidentally mentioned the chess club was republished in the Daily Times of this city, and brought me a written invitation from President Gerwig of the club to be its guest at the second annual banquet, which was served in the club rooms of the Quoit Club, close by the chess club's pavilion. Of course I attended and got my fill of roast chicken and all the "fixin's." I copy from the St. Petersburg Independent of Jan. 28:

"Preceding the exposition (chess-playing), the second annual banquet was served to members and invited guests. Forty-five sat down to table. After the meal short addresses by President A. H. Gerwig, Ben Smith of the Chamber of Commerce and Pierce Gahan of the recreation department were made and a picture taken for the publicity department."

I am sending you herewith a copy of this picture. I continue to quote

Say! Who Owns the Highways, Anyway?

The modern highways were originally planned for the use of the private car driver, says the Railroad Employees and Taxpayers Association of Philadelphia. Private car drivers are also the country's home and farm owners. They constitute the great army of the nation's taxpayers. Two-thirds of the up-to-date highway systems of the United States have been built of property and income taxes, and only one-third out of license fees and gasoline levies.

As a consequence, the Association declares, the great truck, which has enormously increased highway costs, enjoys a right-of-way chiefly paid for by the private car driver, farmer and homeowner. The private car operator has a natural right to the safe and from the Independent by Mat Hews:

"The most wonderful exhibition of simultaneous chess playing that St. Petersburg has ever been treated to was given under the auspices of the local chess club in the club rooms of the Quoit Club, Friday evening when J. C. Eppens played against 25 boards and scored 20 wins, four draws and only one loss." Then follows the names of his opponents, with their particular openings. "By one o'clock (a. m.) the majority of tables were idle. Eppens seemed none the worse for his six hours of concentration and when the last move had been made asked for a match, commenting that his cigar had gone out; it had been out for at least three hours."

The sole winner from Eppens, J. C. Percy, a hotel proprietor of Lakeville, Conn., with whom I chatted before the banquet and beside whom I sat during the playing, is an ex-engineer and a fine fellow. Mr. Howe, secretary of the club, has won one or more tournaments this winter. Mr. Long, is an old friend of mine and kindly took me home to Gulfport at 2 in the morning!

Great is chess, for brain (mental) exercise. I turn to the shuffle-board for physical exercise and to hikes after shells on the Gulf beaches.

STRAND THEATRE

The brilliant Eugene O'Neill drama, "Strange Interlude," comes Wednesday and Thursday with Norma Shearer playing the intensely emotional heroine, Nina Leeds, and Clark Gable cast as Doctor Ned Darrell, whose influence plays havoc with her life.

Its amazing use of spoken thoughts or "asides" has been retained in the screen version, necessitating the use of two separate sound systems to record dialogue. Of additional interest is the fact that the action of the plot covers some thirty years, requiring nine different transformations of character to denote the aging of the principals.

The story of "Strange Interlude" revolves about the daughter of a college professor who finds herself on the verge of a nervous breakdown as a result of having denied herself to her lover, who is subsequently killed in the World War. As a hysterical reaction, she strips herself of all inhibitions and lives a life of complete, erotic abandon. Later, she finds herself adored by one man, married to a second, and in love with a third, which circumstances involve her in a tremendously dramatic vortex. The narrative continues until Nina Leeds is an aged woman, at which time her problems conflict with those of her grown-up son and his sweetheart.—adv.

A wonderful day for an outing, and the round trip cost $2. Distance, about 77 miles by the Fitchburg division and over the Southern division, about 85 miles.

Those excursions give people who enjoy the wide open spaces a grand chance to enjoy the beauties of the country in winter at a minimum cost. Why the B. & M. R. R. didn't wake up to the fact that it could earn some dollars 10 years ago is past my comprehension. It had the rolling stock, and N. H. had the playground waiting for the folks to come.

OUR CHANGING DIET

Interesting Food Facts Are Told Rotarians By Dr. A. W. Foss

In response to a very general demand the following interesting paper, presented Friday by Dr. Alvin W. Foss at the local Rotary Club meeting, is given in part.

Primitive man had the greatest difficulty in obtaining sufficient food to eke out a miserable existence. The development of agriculture including the cultivation of the soil and the domestication of animals furnished many new possibilities for the production of foods derived from animals as well as from plants. Improved methods of communication, the railroad refrigerator cars, etc. make it possible today to have all sorts of food from all over the world.

It may be a matter of some interest to ascertain if there have really been any noteworthy changes in our national dietary noteworthy in the last 200 years. Are there styles in food?

In "The Accomplished Cook, or the Art and Mystery of Cookery," printed in 1678, there are bills of fare for every month in the year. Here are some details of a menu for All Saints Day in November. The first course alone includes 20 dishes, beginning with oysters and continuing through beef, capons, geese, duck, mutton, venison, swans, veal and roast turkey, and ending with a double bordered custard. The second course includes 20 more dishes, oranges, lemons and more meat dishes, and so on and so on until we reach the dessert—jellies and tarts and gingerbread and other fruits according to the original bill of fare.

One is impressed on reading such menus with the great abundance and variety of meat. With the passing of the years there has been a gradual displacement of meats from their former position of supremacy. The modern statistics of the food industry indicate an increased consumption of dairy products, vegetables, fruits and sugar.

During the early part of the last century sugar was used primarily as a condiment. The consumption in 1823 has been estimated as enough to give each person 8.8 pounds per year. In 1931 the annual per capita consumption was 108 pounds, or 12 times as much. This would be over 500 calories per day, about one-sixth of the energy intake. Incidentally this had been accomplished with a tremendous reduction in the cost of the product. One thousand calories now cost less than three cents.

These marked changes in our food habits suggest several things,—in the first place the great adaptability of the human organism to food as well as to other things.

Is instinct a safe guide in eating? Under normal conditions of supply and normal conditions of health, little attention is given by the great mass of mankind to the question of what or how much should be eaten. They simply eat what they want and as much as they want and go about their business. How can they long survive in such ignorance? The only possible answer is that they are endowed with instincts which guide them so well that under normal conditions of life they escape the many dangers that until recently they were unconscious of. Instinct however has its limitations.

The ideal diet should be one that gives a sufficient number of calories to maintain normal weight. It should have a proper balance between protein, carbohydrate and fat. It should have a sufficient amount of vitamins and minerals, calcium, phosphorus, iron, manganese and copper. Translating this into ordinary language would be something like this. Meat or fish once a day. One or two eggs a day. Fruit and green vegetables every day, preferably one or the other at each meal. Butter or cream at each meal and for children a liberal amount of milk. Babies should have orange juice and either cod liver oil or viosterol. Bread, potato, cereals and vegetables for carbohydrate, some sugar but not too much, and for the diabetic, no sugar.

There is no field of practical importance related to human well-being in which there is greater opportunity for dogmatism and quackery for pseudo-science and unmerited prescriptions and proscriptions than in the domain of our daily diet. Those who have seen the pendulum of enthusiasm swing from one extreme food fad to another in the course of years will be wary. Let them keep an open mind without becoming too reactionary to notice that our food habits do change.
